Bonds approved for firefighting equipment

Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom said he was very pleased the Louisiana Bond Commission recently approved the sale of bonds that will allow the Department of Agriculture and Forestry to upgrade its heavy wildfire fighting equipment.

Odom said the bond money would be used to purchase 94 tandem axle transport trucks capable of moving a new allotment of 69 John Deere 650 bulldozers with environmental cabs.

"The forestry industry has reduced their firefighting capacity which puts the burden on us to effectively fight wildfires," Odom said. "We're charged by law with the duty of protecting our forests. With the new bulldozers and trucks we'll be better equipped to protect our forests."

Odom also said the new bulldozers are safer for operators. They are outfitted with state-of-the-art environmental protection cabs to provide additional safety to the operators.

"The new bulldozers are safer for the operators because they have enclosed cabs that filter smoke to make sure the firefighters have clean air to breathe while they're on the fireline," Odom said. "More and more people are moving from the city to developments near rural, forested land. I know when a forest fire threatens Louisiana homes the homeowners should feel confident our department can effectively handle the emergency. These new trucks and bulldozers can traverse and fight fires in just about any kind of rough terrain Mother Nature throws at us."

Odom added that the new transport trucks have 40 percent more horsepower allowing them to transport the larger bulldozers anywhere in the state on short notice.

"There is still a lot of blow down residue from Katrina and Rita and these bulldozers will be able to plow right through that downed timber," Odom said. "This is the best forest firefighting equipment and we're glad to be able to offer this level of protection to Louisiana."

Commissioner
